This principle approval is based on the technical specifications submitted in relation to the vehicle described above, as well as the intended use described in the motivation. It is at your own risk if you purchase, import or manufacture an abnormal vehicle without first obtaining an approval in principle. This does not exempt the MIB from following the normal homologation process for registration and licensing on the NaTIS. Any deviation from the specifications of the original application, or the intended use described in the motivation, will result in this approval being null and void.

The vehicle may only be operated on public roads under an Abnormal Load exemption permit, issued in terms of Section 81 of the National Road Traffic Act. Permits will be issued based on the guidelines as specified in the TRH11, Guidelines for the Conveyance of Abnormal Load Vehicles.

It is further required that the vehicle must be operated with due consideration to other road users.
