MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE BUSINESS LICENSING BILL, 2025

1. BACKGROUND

1.1 Governments seek to achieve a wide range of social, economic, environmental, and regional and equity objectives through various legislative and fiscal tools most commonly through spending, taxation and regulation. A Government's role in the economy can be broken down into two basic sets of functions, firstly it attempts to promote economic stability and growth and secondly, it attempts to regulate and control the economy. Its tools for promoting stability and growth are fiscal policy (alterations in tax rates and spending programmes) and monetary policy (alterations in the amount of money in circulation). Regulation is one of the state's core functions. It is also one of its classical functions. From a historical perspective, the state engaged in regulation long before the government also took it upon itself to provide welfare services to its citizens. Regulation defines the border between state and society, government and market (Christensen, 2010). Regulations are indispensable to the proper functioning of economies and societies. They underpin markets, protect the rights and safety of citizens and ensure the delivery of public goods and services. Government regulation provides rules, standards and guidance to individuals and organisations.

1.2 South Africa is committed to building a developmental state that efficiently guides national economic development by mobilising the resources of society and directing them toward the realisation of common goals. A developmental state plays an active role in guiding economic development and using the resources of the country to meet the needs of the people. A developmental state tries to balance economic growth and social development.

1.3 Section 22 of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa, 1996 ("Constitution"), provides that every citizen has the right to choose their trade, occupation or profession freely and that the practice of a trade, occupation or profession may be regulated by law. The Businesses Act, 1991 (Act No. 71 of 1991) ("Businesses Act"), as amended in 1993, provides for the issuing of trade licenses and permits by municipalities to both formal and informal businesses that want to operate in their geographic jurisdiction. Business licenses are permits issued by local government that allow individuals or companies to conduct business within the government's geographical jurisdiction. It is the authorisation to start a business issued by the local government. A single jurisdiction often requires multiple licenses that are issued by multiple government departments and agencies. Business licenses vary between countries, states, and local municipalities. There are often many licenses, registrations and certifications required to conduct a business in a single location.

1.4 Trade regulation in South Africa has a long history beginning in colonial times and continuing into the establishment of the Republic. It was also invariably inter-linked with colonial laws and apartheid laws especially laws, that regulated access and ownership of land, housing and trade, on the basis of racial discrimination.

1.5 During the 1980s, much of the legal framework that the apartheid government had used for decades to control and restrict black business undertaking was removed. The 1980s represented a period of deregulation in which the policy climate surrounding the small-scale industry began to shift from outright repression to tolerance and, in some instances, initiatives for the limited promotion of black businesses. In the beginning of 1980, under the leadership of the newly founded Small Business Development Corporation new efforts to stimulate small-scale black manufactures were gradually put in place as part of a wider growth strategy. This period also saw the abolition of a number of apartheid laws, initially the Influx Control Act, 1986 (Act No. 68 of 1986) and subsequently the Group Areas Act, 1950 (Act No. 41 of 1950), the Black Land Act, 1913 (Act No. 27 of 1913), the Development Trust and Land Act, 1936 (Act No. 18 of 1936) and the Population Registration Act, 1950 which was repealed in 1991.

1.6 A further development came in 1991, with the enactment of the Businesses Act, which repealed a wide range of licensing laws relating to many different types of businesses. The Businesses Act was amended in 1993 to, amongst others, provide for the power of the Minister to amend Schedule 2 to the said Act, which lists the businesses that require a business license, as well as to provide powers for licensing authorities to impound goods and equipment where appropriate.

1.7 Since the enactment of the Businesses Act, many changes have taken place in the South African economy. Technological advances during this time created an environment that enabled different types of small business to flourish. Furthermore, with the abolishment of the influx control laws, migration from the rural areas to the cities, including foreign migration has seen a major increase in un-regulated or unlicensed businesses.

1.8 Since 1994, a substantial body of new laws has emerged from all levels of government to fulfil the mandate presented by the Constitution. The journey towards a constitutional, democratic order began with the adoption of the Constitution and has continued with the enactment of new laws as well as the amendment and or repeal of old laws. This effort was spearheaded by the South Africa Law Reform Commission ("SALRC") whose mandate is to do research with reference to all branches of the law of the Republic and to study and investigate all such branches to make recommendations for the development, improvement, modernisation or reform thereof, including the repeal of obsolete or unnecessary provisions, the removal of anomalies, the bringing about of uniformity in the law in force in the various parts of the Republic, the consolidation or codification of any branch of the law and steps aimed at making the common law more readily available.

1.9 In its October 2016 provisional review, the SALRC identified 226 statutes that were administered by the then Department of Trade and Industry ("DTI"). Of these 226 statutes, five had been transferred to two other departments whereby, in February 2010, the administration of the Competition Act, 1998 (Act No. 89 of 1998) was transferred to the Department of Economic Development and, on 15 July 2014, certain Acts with their amendment Acts were transferred to the Minister of Small Business Development, including the Close Corporations Act, 1984 (Act No. 69 of 1984), the National Small Enterprise Act, 1996 (Act No. 102 of 1996) ("National Small Enterprise Act") and the Co-operatives Act, 2005 (Act No. 14 of 2005) ("Co-operatives Act").

1.10 In this 2016 review, the SALRC proposed that nineteen (19) Acts be completely repealed, and also made recommendations on the amendments of a large number of Acts. The Businesses Act was, however, not identified for repeal or amendment in this review. While the SALRC did not recommend the review of the Businesses Act, the need for this legislation to be reviewed had been realised not only by the Government but also by the very stakeholders that the said Act impacts on, especially small enterprises both formal and informal, who are involved in street trading.

1.11 The review of the Businesses Act began around 2010 and culminated in the gazetting of the Licensing of Businesses Bill on the 18th of March 2013 by the then Minister of Trade and Industry. This was further extended to 30th April 2013. Public consultation suggested to the Minister that the time given for consultation was not enough. As a result, the Minister established a task team with particular terms of reference to consult with the general public and constituencies. This Task Team submitted its report in early 2014 for consideration by the Minister.

1.12 With the establishment of the Department of Small Business Development (“DSBD”) in 2014, two pieces of legislation were initially transferred from the DTIC to the DSBD, namely, the National Small Enterprise Act and the Co-operatives Act. In the process of discussing the further transfer of functions, it was agreed that the Businesses Act would be transferred to the DSBD, but this process was never completed and finalised through a Presidential proclamation. In October 2020, the Businesses Act and thus the draft Licensing of Business Bill, 2013, were assigned to the DSBD by Presidential proclamation.

1.13 During the 2021/2022 period, the DSBD started the process of reviewing the Businesses Act and the erstwhile Licensing of Business Bill, 2013, and envisaged that the Business Licensing Bill would be introduced in Parliament by the end of the 2023/24 financial year. This was, however, suspended in order to prioritise the finalisation of the Business Licensing Policy as approved by Cabinet on 28 May 2025, so as to establish a policy basis for the Bill.

Additional funding would be needed for the development of a national computerised business licensing system that would have functionality and operating rights for provinces and municipalities.

5.2 Provincial and local government economic departments that have already implemented business regulatory services and structures would not face any significant changes and additional costs, while those that had not implemented the appropriate systems would have to streamline and further increase their organisation from the current approach of combining business regulation with LED to fully fledged business regulation and consumer protection directorates.

6. CONSTITUTIONAL IMPLICATIONS

The Bill has been aligned to the objectives set out in the Constitution as follows—

6.1 In terms of section 22 of the Constitution, every citizen has the right to choose their trade, occupation, or profession freely. The practice of a trade, occupation, or profession may be regulated by law.

6.2 In terms of section 154 of the Constitution—

- (a) the national government and provincial governments, by legislative and other measures, must support and strengthen the capacity of municipalities to manage their own affairs, to exercise their powers and to perform their functions; and
- (b) draft national or provincial legislation that affects the status, institutions, powers or functions of local government that must be published for public comment before it is introduced in Parliament or a provincial legislature, in a manner that allows organised local government, municipalities and other interested persons an opportunity to make representations with regard to the draft legislation.

6.3 In terms of Part A of Schedule 4 to the Constitution, “trade” is a functional area of concurrent national and provincial legislative competence. The Bill provides for a province to exercise its constitutional powers to develop provincial business licensing legislation and regulations consistent with national legislation and regulations. The Bill also provides for local government to exercise its constitutional powers to develop municipal business licensing by-laws that are consistent with national and provincial legislation and regulations.

6.4 In terms of Part B of Schedule 4 to the Constitution, “trading regulations” as a local government matter is a functional area of concurrent national and provincial legislative competence, to the extent set out in sections 155(6) and (7) of the Constitution. The Bill provides for a province to exercise its constitutional powers to develop provincial business licensing legislation and regulations consistent with national legislation and regulations. The Bill also provides for local government to exercise its constitutional powers to develop municipal business licensing by-laws that are consistent with national and provincial legislation and regulations.

6.5 In terms of Part B of Schedule 5 to the Constitution, “street trading” as a local government matter is a functional area of exclusive provincial legislative competence to the extent set out for provinces in sections 155(6) and (7). The provisions in the Bill are aligned with Part B of Schedule 5 to the Constitution as it relates to “street trading”.

6.6 In terms of section 44(2) of the Constitution, Parliament may intervene in the passing of legislation which falls within the ambit of a functional area listed in Schedule 5 to the Constitution under certain specified conditions. In this regard, section 44(2) of the Constitution reads as follows:

"Parliament may intervene, by passing legislation in accordance with section 76(1), with regard to a matter falling within a functional area listed in Schedule 5, when it is necessary—

- (a) to maintain national security;*
- (b) to maintain economic unity;*
- (c) to maintain essential national standards;*

- (d) to establish minimum standards required for the rendering of services; or to prevent unreasonable action taken by a province which is prejudicial to the interests of another province or the country as a whole."

7. PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE

7.1 In *Tongoane and Others v Minister of Agriculture and Land Affairs and Others*¹, ("Tongoane") the Constitutional Court ("CC") confirmed the test formulated in order to determine the classification of a Bill ("tagging test"). According to the CC, what matters for the purposes of tagging, is not the substance or purpose of the Bill, but rather whether the provisions of the Bill in "substantial measure" fall within a functional area listed in Schedule 4.²

7.2 In commenting on the "substantial measure test", the CC made the following remarks:

"[60] The test for tagging must be informed by its purpose. Tagging is not concerned with determining the sphere of government that has the competence to legislate on a matter. Nor is the process concerned with preventing interference in the legislative competence of another sphere of government. The process is concerned with the question of how the Bill should be considered by the provinces and in the NCOP, and how a Bill must be considered by the provincial legislatures depends on whether it affects the provinces. The more it affects the interests, concerns, and capacities of the provinces, the more say the provinces should have on its content. ..."

[71] On the other hand, the "substantial measure" test permits a consideration of the provisions of the Bill and their impact on matters that substantially affect the provinces. This test ensures that legislation that affects the provinces will be enacted in accordance with a procedure that allows the provinces to fully and effectively play their role in the law-making process. This test must therefore be endorsed.

[72] To summarise: any Bill whose provisions substantially affect the interests of the provinces must be enacted in accordance with the procedure stipulated in section 76. Whether a Bill is a section 76 Bill is determined in two ways. First, by the explicit list of legislative matters in section 76(3)(a)-(f), and second, by whether the provisions of a Bill in substantial measure fall within a concurrent provincial legislative competence." [Our underlining.]

7.3 The phrase "substantial measure" is further defined as follows:³

"It is submitted that 'substantial measure' refers to the extent or degree to which a particular Bill deals with a matter of concurrent legislative competence as listed in Schedule 4. To put it differently, it refers to the extent of, or degree of impact of the particular Bill on provincial interests as listed in Schedule 4. The impact or effect of the Bill on the interest of the provinces must be of substantial extent, degree, or measure for it to be tagged as a section 76 Bill. ...what is important should be the cumulative or combined effect of the Bill rather than how individual provisions individually affect a particular concurrent matter. Although the individual provisions will be considered, it is their cumulative or combined impact that is ultimately determinative of whether a particular Bill in substantial measure falls within a concurrent legislative competence of the two spheres of government." [Our underlining.]

7.4 As stated above, a Bill, the provisions of which in substantial measure fall within a functional area listed in Schedule 4 to the Constitution, must be classified as a section 76 Bill. In order to test whether the provisions of a Bill fall within a functional area listed in Schedule 4, the cumulative effect of all the provisions of the Bill must be taken into account in order to determine its impact on the provinces.

7.5 As indicated in the above discussion, the Bill deals with the functional areas of "trade" and "trading regulations" as envisaged in Part A and Part B of Schedule 4 to the Constitution, respectively. In terms of the functional areas of "trade" and "trading regulations", the national and provincial government has concurrent legislative competence. Since the provisions of the Bill deal with "trade" and "trading regulations" which are functional areas listed in Schedule 4, the State Law Advisers are of the view that the Bill must be tagged as a section 76 Bill.

7.6 The State Law Advisers are also of the opinion that it is necessary to refer the Bill to the National House of Traditional and Khoi-San Leaders in terms of section 39(1)(a)(ii) of the Traditional and Khoi-San Leadership Act, 2019 (Act No. 3 of 2019), since the Bill deals with matters related to the status, institutions and powers of local government, as envisaged in section 154(2) of the Constitution.
